ABOUT THE COMMISSION

The South Carolina Commission for Minority Affairs is the official state agency charged with bridging the gap between South Carolina's ethnic minority communities and the State of South Carolina, the business community, and community and civic organizations.

The Commission's mission is "to be a catalyst that identifies and examines emerging issues and trends by providing constructive solutions and approaches to support the policy and socio-economic development of ethnic minority communities."

MESSAGE FROM THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Greetings,

Today marks the dawning of a new day at the S.C. Commission for Minority Affairs as we launch our statewide Second Chance Reentry Resource Guide (SCRRG). This resource guide is designed to enhance the transition process from incarceration to emancipation. In 2019, South Carolina spent approximately $23,673.00 to house an inmate. In order to facilitate emancipation and to save money, the state frees more than 7,500 inmates per year that have three years or less to serve on their sentences. This saves the state approximately $177,997,000.00 annually. In 2016, of the more than 9,100 inmates released, approximately 21% returned to prison. The SCRRG seeks to reduce recidivism and increase expungement eligibility for the formerly incarcerated by offering a roadmap to reintegration into society.

This resource guide uses a common sense, evidence-based approach to reducing crime, improving public safety and expanding the workforce. It provides people who were formally incarcerated with a comprehensive toolkit that consolidates reentry services available in the state of South Carolina. The SCRRG will help bar the revolving doors that lead to reincarceration and offers a clear path to lasting freedom.

This resource guide was made in collaboration with South Carolina agencies, including the S.C. Department of Probation, Parole and Pardon Services; S.C. Department of Corrections; and the S.C. Department of Employment and Workforce. It was also made in partnership with civic, faith-based, and community organizations to bridge the gaps between incarceration and emancipation on the road to prosperity.

It is made in the spirit of the words as stated by former President George W. Bush, "America is the land of the second chance - and when the gates of the prison open, the path ahead should lead to a better life."

It is our hope that through this Resource Guide many will find what they need to build a better life for themselves and their family.

Sincerely,

MESSAGE OF HOPE

Peace and Blessings,

You have been given another chance to live your life. This is the moment you've dreamed of, talked about, and planned, for many times over. I was released from the South Carolina Department of Corrections on May 15, 2015, after serving 22 years and 5 months of a life sentence. Since being home, I've learned 4 essential principles that have allowed me to become successful as a husband, father, businessman, author, mentor and community organizer.

These principles will guide you on this new journey of freedom:

- Your mindset determines whether you succeed or fail.
- Self-worth aids you in areas in which you're having to choose a new environment, new friends, as well as relationships.
- Your surroundings play a key part in how well you're able to adapt to life after being incarcerated.
- Always display gratitude when DAILY counting your blessings. Keep pushing...your individual greatness will reveal itself in due time.
- Trust the process and know everything has a season. Things may move slowly for the first few weeks, but in time you'll experience smooth sailing.

Congratulations on your second chance. Practice the above principles and stay focused. Path2Redemption offers support groups in the event you may need a little encouragement. Feel free to contact me via email for more information.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

When the South Carolina Commission for Minority Affairs was signed into law in 1993, one of the agency's focus areas was developing programs to address disproportionate minority incarceration. Today, a full 28 years after the Commission's initial findings, incarceration remains a serious issue in South Carolina. Though racial minorities make up approximately 31.5 % of South Carolina's general population, they comprise 62 % of the state's inmate population. [1] Meaning minority South Carolinians are twice as likely to be incarcerated than their non-racial minority peers.

However, issues around incarceration go beyond race and also cover educational attainment: about half of South Carolina's inmate population does not have a high school diploma or GED. [2] Moreover, about 69% of female inmates have been diagnosed with a mental illness. [3] These statistics mean that inmates will leave correctional facilities with issues that can significantly affect their re-entry into the workforce. South Carolina's struggles with a changing economy and job readiness have been well documented. [4] For those re-entering the workforce with prior convictions, educational deficiencies, or mental illness, the economic prospects can be even more grim. This puts many at risk for recidivism.

Because of the varying obstacles faced by those re-entering the workforce, the South Carolina Commission for Minority Affairs aims to offer them fresh start. This guide provides a directory of various resources that includes information on housing, vocational rehabilitation, mental health, legal services, substance abuse treatment, and more that will ease the transition from correctional facilities to places of employment.

ABOUT THE GUIDE

This guide was created to provide essential information and resources to those who were formerly incarcerated, and their families. The formerly incarcerated face many obstacles when reentering their communities. Our goal is to help them have a successful transition back to their neighborhoods, homes, and places of employment.

This resource guide covers various topics including obtaining identification, health facilities and programs, housing assistance, financial assistance, legal services, vocational rehabilitation, government services and more.

The guide was created for ex-offenders, their family and/or friends, service providers, and anyone who serves as an advocate for the formally incarcerated.

Disclaimer: The information on local, state and national resources was provided by the service agency or was found on the organization's website. While every effort is made to provide current and accurate content for each agency/organization, it is recommended that you contact the service provider directly before visiting the provider. If you use information from the guide, it is your responsibility to make sure that any laws have not changed and applies to your situation.*

If you are aware of resources or organizations that should be added to the guide, please send a copy of the Agency Update/New Entry Form located on page 125.

For more information about the guide, please contact Ms. Cynthia Haddad, African American Affairs Division Program Manager, at 803-995-8553 or chaddad@cma.sc.gov.

PATHWAY TO REENTERING YOUR COMMUNITY

Questions to Ask BEFORE Your Release

What are you doing to prepare to meet your reentry goals?

(Make a list of the things you are doing now, such as certificate programs, mental health counseling, and meeting with a mentor, that are setting you up for a successful reentry.)

Where are you going to live after you are released?

(At least 3 months before your release, sit down with your reentry or transition coordinator to plan out your living situation. Use the following checklist to help guide the conversation you have with your reentry coordinator about housing.)

Do you know who is picking you up from the facility on the day of your release?

Yes

No

Notes:

Do you know who you're going to live with (if anyone)?

OBTAINING IDENTIFICATION

It is imperative for an individual to have some form of government-issued identification for employment and other purposes. Many of those leaving incarceration may lack sufficient knowledge of what is necessary to obtain government issued identification, yet, oftentimes, it is as simple as possessing a birth certification and / or social security card.

According to the SC Department of Motor Vehicles, to receive a free state sponsored identification a person must have a current ID that will expire within 12 months. For example, John Doe's ID card expires in February 2021, he is eligible for a free ID.

To receive the free ID, this must also be the person's first ever ID card. For example, Jane Doe has never had an ID card before BUT her current license and photo are still valid. She gets a free ID.

To receive the Free ID, all other credentials MUST be turned in to the South Carolina Department of Motor Vehicles. EX: John Doe had a motorcycle permit and a car license. John Doe will have to turn in both to get a free ID card. If John Doe had an ID card that is still good until 2024, then it will cost $10 to get a duplicate. If Jane Doe had a permit that is still good until 2021, then it will cost $2.50 to get a duplicate.

Once credentials have been expired for more than 9 months, the applicant can only obtain a new identification with original documentation. For example, John Doe's credential expired in 2001, thus he must submit all original paperwork to receive new identification.

DOCUMENTS NEEDED TO OBTAIN AN ID CARD

Social Security Cards: To obtain a social security card, please call 1-800-772-1213.

Birth Certificates: You must submit a valid government ID, pay a processing fee and submit an application to apply for a copy of a birth certificate. To obtain a copy of your birth certificate, contact the South Carolina Department of Health and Environmental Control. There are several ways to request a South Carolina birth certificate:

By mail or in person: DHEC Vital Records, 2600 Bull St. Columbia, SC 29201 | (803) 898-3630 NOTE: Make sure envelope is addressed to "Vital Records" if mailing the request. Regional Vital Records Offices issue long form birth certificates. Visit scdhec.gov for a list of regional offices.

Online or by phone: Visit www.vitalchek.com or call 1-877-284-1008

Visit www.scdhec.gov/vital-records/birth-certificates for more information. If you were born in another state, visit <http://www.cdc.gov/nchs/w2w> for instructions on how you can obtain your birth certificate.

Entering the Community After Incarceration — How We Can Help

SocialSecurity.gov |

Social Security and/or Supplemental Security Income (SSI) benefits are suspended when people are confined to jail or prison.

- For Social Security beneficiaries, benefits remain suspended until the inmate is released.
- For SSI beneficiaries, benefits are terminated when the person is incarcerated for a year or more.

People need funds to cover living expenses when they're released from prison. To help them make a successful transition back into the community, benefits need to be started as soon as possible.

How soon can benefits be started after release?

The amount of time it takes to start benefits depends on the person's situation:

- If Social Security benefits were only suspended, Social Security can usually restart them without much delay;
- If benefits were terminated, benefits can take a few months to resume; and
- If the inmate wasn't previously entitled or eligible for benefits, and is alleging a disability, or SSI benefits were terminated a new application and disability determination are required. In this situation, a decision about the person's disability could take from three to five months.

Is there a way to expedite benefit payments?

By following a special procedure before release, we can pay benefits much sooner. We refer to this as the prerelease procedure.

How does the prerelease procedure work?

When an institution has a prerelease agreement with Social Security, we can:

- Begin processing an inmate's application up to several months before the inmate's scheduled release date;
- Make a prospective determination of potential eligibility and payment amount based on the inmate's expected circumstances after release; and
- Start paying benefits shortly after the inmate is released from the institution.

When notified by the institution, Social Security will follow this procedure if the inmate is likely to be eligible for benefits within 30 days of his or her scheduled release date.

How can institutions establish a prerelease agreement?

Either the local Social Security office or the institution may initiate a discussion about setting up a prerelease agreement.

The prerelease agreement:

- May be an informal verbal agreement; or
- May be a written agreement signed by both parties.

What are the responsibilities of each party?

Social Security's responsibilities

In a typical prerelease agreement, the Social Security office will:

- Provide guidelines about what evidence is needed;
- Provide a contact person to assist the institution and the inmate in applying the prerelease procedures;
- Process claims and reinstatements in a timely manner; and
- Notify the institution promptly when Social Security has made a decision about the inmate's eligibility for benefits.

Institution's responsibilities

The institution will agree to:

- Notify Social Security of people scheduled for release in the near future who may be eligible for benefits;

- Provide available current medical evidence or nonmedical information for the inmate including a statement about the inmate's ability to handle funds;
- Provide Social Security with the anticipated release date; and
- Notify Social Security as soon as the inmate is released or changes that delay the release date.

What are the advantages of a prerelease agreement?

A prerelease agreement:

- Allows both parties to streamline the process for starting/restarting benefits promptly after an inmate is released; and
- Facilitates the inmate's return to the community by providing him/her with an adequate source of income.

Federal Bonding

Providing the confidence for second chances

The Federal Bonding Program provides fidelity bonds to employers who are reluctant to hire jobseekers considered “at-risk” or hard-to-place due to things such as judicial involvement, substance abuse recovery, poor credit, lack of work history or dishonorable discharge. A fidelity bond can also be provided to avert a layoff or secure a promotion.

Bonds are made available through the S.C. Department of Employment and Workforce (DEW).

Quick Facts:

- Enrollment in the SC Works system is required for an individual to be bonded.
<https://jobs.scworks.org/>
- Federal Bonding provides employers protection against loss of money or property due to employee dishonesty.
- Bonds are issued for the first six months of employment.
- Bonds are typically issued for $5,000 of fidelity insurance coverage.
- There is no cost to the bond-eligible employee or the employing business.
- Federal Bonds are processed by the DEW State Federal Bonding Coordinator.
- Bonds automatically terminate after six months.

Contact your local SC Works Center for additional jobseeker services.
